

Personal Reflection – April 21, 2024

Green Wins!

It is late April in North Carolina. The impossibly beautiful array of colors on Spring trees and bushes we have lived in has gently handed over to a similarly impossible array of green leaves. From my rocking chair I can see at least six tones of green! Green wins the Spring Beauty Contest in my town.

It is a victory of photosynthesis and chlorophyll. Understanding this process of greening is bit beyond my ken; celebrating it and the oxygen it continues to offer me to breathe is not.

I celebrate the design!!

A month of bright colors satisfies. The quiet of multi-green can serve until the blazing gold and browns of autumn. What a wonderful world!
